We have studied the behavior of human red blood cells infected with Plasmodium falciparum in in vitro assays. Using high-pressure free-flow electrophoresis to separate infected and uninfected red cells, we found that parasites circulate within a pool of uninfected red cells. In contrast to other blood stages, the rosette stage of the parasite was not restricted to infected red cells. This was also true in vivo. In human plasmas of a person infected with P. falciparum and also in in vitro assays of P. falciparum-infected human red cells, the rosette stage was not found. These data suggest that the pool of uninfected red cells could be of importance in the pathogenesis of cerebral malaria and that the rosette stage of the parasite may not be essential in the pathogenesis of this disease. 82157476af
